Bonnie Easton

The fall season is a good time to settle into an armchair for some cozy reading.

The Elements: A Novel by John Boyne (The Heart's Invisible Furies) was first published in Ireland as four separate novellas to explore various aspects of sexual violence. These four connected stories feature enabler, accomplice, predator, and victim. Boyne himself acknowledges his own abuse as a young man and found that writing the four stories both dark and cathartic. The elements—water, earth, fire and air—each have their own narrator living in a complex world of secrets.

On a similar subject, Service: A Novel by Sarah Gilmartin takes us into the world of the high-end restaurants in Dublin and the relationships of chefs to their wait staff. Hannah reads that her former employer, renowned chef Daniel Costello, faces charges of sexual assault. That report brings Hannah back to a summer many years earlier when she was a waitress in his restaurant. He seemed a kind man whom she could trust back then, but their relationship took a turn when he exerted his power over her to get his way. Daniel's wife hides in her house from reporters as his trial begins. The story unfolds through the alternating voices of Hannah, Daniel, and Daniel's wife Julia.

Imagine a flock of sheep on a hillside in Glenkill, Ireland, who have decided to solve the murder of their shepherd, George. That's what mystery writer, Leonie Swann, wants readers to do in Three Bags Full (A Sheep Detective Story). George took good care of his flock with reading books to them every night, but now he is dead on the hillside—stabbed with a spade. Their leader, Miss Maple is the smartest sheep. Her assistants in the investigation are Othello, Mapple the Whale, and Zora, all of whom possess various useful skills to offer to the investigation. They venture into town to observe a list of suspects—Ham, the terrifying butcher; Rebecca, the secretive newcomer; Gabriel, the shady shepherd of a strange flock; and Father Will, a sinister priest. This book has been translated into 26 languages. The second book in the series is Big Bad Wool.

For nonfiction readers, there is The Slow Road North: How I Found Peace in an Improbable Country by Rosie Schaap. The author was a columnist for the New York Times Magazine. She suffers terrible losses with the deaths of both her husband and her mother while she is still in her thirties and begins a search for a home where she feels a sense of peace. She found it in the people and the beauty that the city of Belfast offered her. A quote from her book is: "To love is to remember; to remember is to keep loving."

With the hundreds of books published about the Kennedy family, is the public not tired of reading about this family dynasty? Possibly not. Author of several New York Times bestselling books about the Kennedys, J. Randy Taraborrelli, offers two more in the last couple years: Jackie: Public, Private, Secret and JFK: Public, Private, Secret. Some of the topics he touches on in these new biographies are the nude photos of Jackie and who released them, her post-Onassis relationships, the truth about JFK's relationship with Marilyn Monroe, and his feelings about his Cabinet undermining the Bay of Pigs operation. JFK's so-called Camelot administration continues to fascinate Kennedy watchers 60 years later.

For poetry lovers, there is Best-Loved Irish Love Poems, edited by Nicole Reddy and features the great works of such Irish literary giants as William Butler Yeats, James Joyce, Speranza (Lady Jane Wilde), Oscar Wilde, and many more. They write of both the joy and the pain of romantic love.

Five more entries in the 100 best Irish books of the 21st Century are: Fallen by Lia Mills, Nora by Nuala O. Connor, Again, Rachel by Marian Keyes, The Rachel Incident by Caroline O'Donoghue, and A Line by Walking by Sara Baume. A website for the complete list is: <https://746books.com/2025/03/17/the-100-best-irish-books-of-the-21st-century/> (or <https://tinyurl.com/3dpy5389>).
